Tea Culture in the United States.

During a recent visit South our attention was called to two subjects of interest to the Southern people—the introduction of Chinese and East Indian labor and the cultivation of tea. It need not be said that reference was not to the spare sprinkling of coolie labor, but to the natural flow through the channels of Pacific railways and steamers from China, irrigating the whole South with an abundant blessing of skilled, reliable labor, to drown out the thrifless nego-gior. The tea culture is a result of the other.

It only remains to point out the adaptability of the Southern soil and climate to the product. The best teas of commerce are grown between the 27th and 31st degrees of north latitude, but the plant is met with in China and Japan as high as 36° 30'. In this country it would grow on a line beginning as high as the northern part of Nevada, crossing the north boundary of New Mexico and south of Kansas, through Missouri on the southern line of Kentucky and Tennessee, and touching the Atlantic at the northeast boundary of North Carolina. On the south, the boundry would be south of Arizona, including all Texas, the borders of the gulf and the peninsula of Florida, excluding a narrow strip of ten or twenty miles of new alluvial coast land, the territory between these limits, emphatically the cotton and sugar lands, would grow tea as richly and liberally as the soils of China and Japan. The best soil in China for tea is described as moderately rich, of a reddish color mixed with sand, and well drained, but not too dry, soil.

We have gone over the process somewhat elaborately. It will be seen that it is sufficiently simple for any laborer to accomplish it under proper direction.

No doubt the introduction of skilled Chinese would in every way facilitate the growth, manipulation and general cultivation of the plant. It can be easily seen that in the future the plant shall have that attention at his hands its importance deserves.

We earnestly recommend the subject to Southern planters. The tea plants can be readily obtained or the seeds at Washington. No doubt Colonel Robinson would in the fall dispose of superfluous seeds. As we have explained, tea can be readily grown in all the Southern States, from the gulf to the north border of Tennessee. The cultivation requires little or no labor. A little weeding and watching—besides the nursing and transplanting—for the first three years, attention to protect it from extremely cold winters, and the plant grows with much less trouble than fruit.

The main care is in the manipulating, but this could be easily learned, and the prospective influx of Chinese labor is another and still stronger inducement to encourage the introduction of the plant.

HUMORS OF TRAVEL.

We have often been amused at the differences in individual character brought out and exhibited by a railroad journey. The experienced traveler lounges into the car as he comes off his train, tosses down his compact traveling bag, pulls out his travel bag, hits the shade side of the car by instinct, and turns over his paper with an air of familiar comfort and confidence in iron, steam and human prudence that is astonishing. He is amazed at ignorance, but patient with it; he knows the conductor, brakesman, engineer, everybody. He has a pocket-book of toady, cocktail-bitters, or cold tea. He quails it moderately, and tends it to one, but not more.

It is too precious to be wasted on the commune vulgar. He is pleasant in anecdote; knows all about railroads—which are good, which bad, and how to make the bad better. He is up to the stations and gatherings of the eating-houses on the way, with a clear perception of their curled milk and slop coffee.

He is a good man, though he has no pocket-book, and he popes untilled point, and serrated except at the beginning.

The plant matures in three years. The seeds are sown in nursery beds in the spring, and are transplanted in the fall, as early as possible. The seedlings are set out in rows, and are thinned out as they grow.
